Publish in the Stata Journal

The Stata Journal is a quarterly publication containing articles about statistics, data science, teaching methods, and effective use of Stata's language.

Serving as a hub for the collected wisdom of countless Stata users since 2001, the Stata Journal promotes communication on statistics and Stata by publishing

| Peer-reviewed articles | Notes and comments | Columns and book reviews | Useful Stata tips | Other materials of interest to users |

Why the Stata Journal is right for you

Ranked consistently in the top 20 among journals in the "Social Sciences, Mathematical Methods" category by the Journal Citation Reports of the ISI Web of Knowledge, the Stata Journal is an exceptional platform for authors to share their applied statistical methods with readers:

- Flexibility to cover a variety of topics of practical importance to researchers, instructors, and students across disciplines
- Trusted platform for making your methods available to practitioners
- Thorough peer review from specialists in your field
- Electronic format, giving readers 24-hour access to your publication
- Worldwide distribution

Submit your work

To view the types of articles accepted and the submission guidelines, visit stata-journal.com/submissions.

After a preliminary editorial review, articles will be sent to reviewers who have expertise in the subject of the article. The Stata Journal uses a blind review system. The review process generally takes three to six months. Authors may contact the editor at any time to check the status of their manuscript.